Feedforward

Feedforward is the process neural networks use to turn the input into an output. Let's study it more carefully, before we dive into how to train the networks.

Error Function

Just as before, neural networks will produce an error function, which at the end, is what we'll be minimizing. The following video shows the error function for a neural network.

NEXT